We Meet Again

Although only in the early stages of its development, the Council of North Central Junior Colleges is rapidly assuming a vital role in the educational workings of the mid-western area. The intimate association of large numbers of persons working toward common ends has always been recognized as a magical stimulant. To meet to exchange ideas and to solve common problems is probably the most generally accepted of all modern educational procedures. To gain some feeling of the vastness of a movement creates a dynamic flow of strength. To meet at the home of the oldest public junior college and to sense its vitality and purposefulness adds to our faith. Surely we shall return to our homes to create, from the inspiration we have received, a finer junior college world for all.
